VOL. XXV.

HOPKINSVILLE, KENTUCKY, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1903.

NO. 88.

Ladies' Tailor Suits ..and Furs..

We strongly recommend early buying on the above lines. The assortment is better now than it will be and prices are lower than they will be later.

Additionally, if you want your tailor suit made-to-order it can be done now in much shorter time than later when the shops get crowded.

Don't Put it Off.

J. H. ANDERSON & CO.

Plush Robes, HORSE BLANKETS AND BUGGIES.

We are just opening up a fine line of "Chase's" Plush Laprobes in light fall and heavy winter weights.

Some Beautiful Patterns.

Come before they are picked over and get choice of a hundred different patterns. We are making prices 15 to 20 per cent. less than regular, which will save you 25c to $1.50 on a robe. Big lot of Horse Blankets from $1 up, see them.

We still have on hand good assortment Buggies, Driving Wagons, Etc., which you can almost price and take. Look through and get prices, it will cost you nothing!

DEMOCRATIC LANDSLIDE.

30,000 MAJORITY

For Democratic State Ticket in Kentucky.

New York Goes Democratic By 70,000 Majority and Mary-land Follows Suit.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 5.—With only 123 precincts unreported, the returns from the Kentucky election give Gov. Beckham a net plurality of 29,373. The total number of precincts in the state is 1,995. Embraced in the 134 unreported are the counties of Martin, Leslie and Knott. The remaining precincts are scattered as follows: Six in the First congressional district, two in the Second, nineteen in the Third, six in the Fourth, two in the Fifth, five in the Seventh, two in the Eighth, five in the Ninth, and thirty-seven in the Tenth and thirty-five in the Eleventh.

Two of the unreported counties, Leslie and Martin, are Republican, while Knott is Democratic. Leslie gave a majority of 1,082 for Yerkes in 1900. Martin gave Yerkes 566 in the same year, while Knott gave Beckham 541 over Yerkes.

The returns from the Eleventh district are not reducing Gov. Beckham's plurality so much as was expected by the Republicans, and it now seems highly probable that the final count will leave his plurality somewhere from 28,000 to 30,000.

THE RACE IN DOUBT.

Both Bradburn and Galloway Claim to be Elected Judge.

Bowling Green, Ky., Nov. 4.—The race for circuit judge in this district between Judge B. W. Bradburn, Dem., and Judge John M. Galloway, Rep., is claimed by both sides. Judge Bradburn's friends tonight are offering to bet two to one he is elected. His friends claim the race by a small majority. No figures of the result are obtainable at Democratic headquarters and the figures given out at Republican headquarters elect Judge Galloway by 299 majority. The vote as they have it is: Edmondson county, Galloway 218 majority; Butler county, Galloway 931 majority; Warren county, Bradburn 826 majority; Allen county, Bradburn 25 majority.

New York City.
George B. McClelland, Democrat, was elected Mayor over Seth Low.

Republican and fusion, by 64,000 plurality. Total vote, 530,000, of which McClelland received 300,000 and Low 236,000. Edward M. Groat, (Tammany) defeats Frederick W. Hinrichs (fusion) for comptroller by 55,000 votes. Chas. V. Forness, (Tammany) elected president of the board of alderman over Edward J. McGuire, (fusion)

A MOUNTAIN CORRESPONDENCE.

BY S. RUETT ROMAN.

My Dr. Allen—I sincerely wish you were Valerie's mother instead of her guardian. I really don't see what use there is of a guardian if he does as you do, lives shut up in his country house, while all sorts of things are happening and undesirable men are trying to marry Valerie—I know this is all jumbled up, but, really, I am so provoked with the child I don't know what I am writing. What she means by her senseless and erratic way of going on, turning off all the nice men and good parties whom the other girls are running after, and who flash around her, and then encouraging such impetuous fellows as Richard Fenton, going walking with him and giving him most of her dances at every cotillon and laughing at every hint or suggestion I make and not following my advice at all, is more than I can fathom.

Everybody is beginning to talk about the roses he sends her—I'd like to know where he gets the means to order American beauties in New York—and his outrageously pointed attentions. I am exasperated to the last degree, and can do absolutely nothing with the troublesome child. I told her plainly the other day that with her looks and education and wealth she certainly ought to marry brilliantly, and that I disapproved emphatically of Richard Fenton.

She laughed and whistled to her dog and went out of the house. I said I would write to you about her silly and "outrageous" conduct, and reminded her of her father's will, and that she must do as you say about marriage until she is 25. She blazed out that she would not be dictated to by you or anybody on such matters, and that Dick Fenton was worth much more than a million dollars. If she were not my child I would wash my hands of her.

Now, I really think you ought to come and look after Valerie—as her guardian.

She was always the queerest and most unmanageable child, and so unlike other girls.

She takes interest in all sorts of queer people and things, and none at all in her gowns. When we were in Paris I entreated her to come with me to consult Donnet and order some costumes for winter. She said that was none of her business, but Donnet's that she was no dressmaker. Just fancy, I learned the other day by accident that she was helping some impoverished Italian woman who claims, I suppose, to be a countess—to raise silk worms.

I nearly fainted when I heard of it. We will have caterpillars throughout the house next.

You really must stop this thing, my dear Allen. You'd better come.

Yours with a nervous headache,
SUSAN FARNLEIGH.

The Cottage on the Cliffs.
My Dear Val—Aren't you rather tired of your unvarying pleasures? Toujours Perdrix gets to be rather sickening, and a little change and variety is a wonderful tonic to brace up one's jaded appreciation of pleasures which become monotonous by constant repetition.

I hear you are growing pale, and your roses are fading, so I thought of you yesterday while watching a clear-skinned mountain girl trudging by with a pail of milk and the idea occurred to me that if you would run up here to these solitudes for a few weeks—or months, my dear—the pig-nut contrast of this life with your ceaseless turmoil and rush would amuse you.

Here you would have nothing on earth to do but drive or stroll through the mountains and chat with your old guardian in the evenings, until you get sleepy and go to bed.

An artist of some value comes here every summer to sketch and paint, and you must give him a few sittings, so that when you leave the hermit of these wilds and go back to your youthful and legitimate frivolities, your image will remain behind on the walls of his library, to keep him company during the long winter evenings.

What inducements can I offer you? The open patches on the slopes of the mountains are white with daisies, Glen Birnie falls tumble and roar a half mile away, an old German cabinet maker from Cologne, skilled in his métier, makes charming pieces of artistic furniture out of hickory and curled leaf maple wood.

Squirrels abound, and brown mountain rabbits run across the road, and this old castle is big and comfortable, and Mrs. Harris, my housekeeper, will look after you with delight.

I had almost forgotten a small lake where you can catch mountain perch, and row in a small boat. If the artist will let you, for the lake and the boat are his.

There is a small picturesque church in a hollow, and its slender spire stretches upwards, and, catching the rays of the setting sun, preaches its own lesson, and the sound of its little bell is distinctly heard from the terrace of my castle, a pretty terrace, Val, where you and I will sit and take our coffee after dinner, following the mode of Europe, while listening to the tinkling of the cowbells, as "the herd winds slowly o'er the lea."

Will you come, Val? Yours faithfully, child,

ALLEN DUNCAN.

Of course I will, and with joy unspokenable, Cousin Allen, joyful to escape persecution, stale and unprofitable glances and a fat man and his glances. You may expect your troublesome ward any day.

I can't possibly say why I became our engagement list is crowded and then matter will never let me off from attending at least one-half of these fearful functions, which have become the scene of an exciting game of hide and seek, carried on by a pursuer and a pursued. The fat man, who possesses a few railroads, some towns and villages, and half the Pacific coast—mamma says, and the writer of this note, I hope you will be able to read it.

If it were not for the kindly help of a nice boy, Dick Fenton, who warns me of my enemy's approach and helps me to elude him, and usually lands him at the table with mamma and a champagne bottle, I would have fallen into his clutches de guerre lasse, and the poor victim, Valerie Farnleigh, would have died a hideous death, in white satin and Venice point, to the sound of Mendelssohn's march.

After this explanation you can realize the utter delight with which I flee away to you and your castle on the heights, and not a soul shall know where I have gone. I am positively beginning to loathe my "monotonous pleasures," as you cleverly call our functions and gatherings, polo excepted, and really, my dearest cousin, if your invitation had not come just when it did I would have accepted an auto ride with my persecutor, the fat man, as a possible alternative ending instead of the other man.

The delight of tramping through fields of daisies, milking cows—did you not include milking in the list of rural diversions you offer—and listening to Glen Birnie falls, and your sweet church bells—

I think I will give mamma the slip, let her do the treadmill round of dinners and other wearisome things, and will take the train without even Annette, and will run up to you to-morrow.

Have you any pretty, rosy-faced children in your mountains? Who is your artist? I know only one. He is—well, he is a very remarkable man, and I will tell you about him when we are sitting on your terrace sipping coffee.

He, too, loves the mountains—I believe better than anything except his art. He has just left town. He wants to finish some wonderful picture.

He will have a great reputation some day, my artist. He has real genius.

Of course I will sit to have my portrait painted if you want me on your library walls, although if you will only invite me I will take up my permanent abode in your castle and gladly forget the world, its pomps and vanities, the fat owner of railroads and an auto, and my artist friend, who is such a dear, jolly fellow, only much too talented.

When did you say you would expect me? Wednesday? Why not to-morrow night?

With delightful anticipations of freedom, cows and daisies and long, confidential chats, VALERIE.

The Castle on the Cliffs.

My Dear Sir—If not too absorbed in your present work I would esteem it a great favor if you will consent to paint a life-size portrait of my ward, who will be my guest in the mountains for a few weeks shortly.

She will give you sittings in any room you may select, and your terms will be entirely satisfactory to me.

I have seen and very much admire some of your work. Allow me to suggest day after tomorrow at one o'clock in the afternoon for the first sitting.

I will add that the young lady has considerable beauty, a consideration which usually must weigh with a talented artist. With regards, yours very truly,
ALLEN DUNCAN.

The Castle on the Cliffs.

My Dear Susan—Val arrived safely last evening, and I trust I can safely promise to send her back to you in good health and spirits.

If you will only stop trying to drive the child, and will realize that you can't possibly thrust a round ball into a square hole, that Valerie is a most remarkable young woman, high-spirited, independent and beautiful, and utterly unamenable to sordid reasons which would readily influence a less noble and high-strung nature, you would spare yourself endless trouble and the child much mortification and unhappiness.

Let her alone is my earnest advice to you. Of one thing you may be sure, wisely or unwisely—but I think wisely, for Val has asked an intellect as she has a tender and true heart—she will make her own selection and shape her own future, and any urging on your part or interference will be time wasted, my dear friend.

She has not mentioned the impetuous fellow, Richard Fenton, who wrote me, but alludes frequently to an artist friend whom she says is a genius. To my mind there is more danger in that direction. I will get her to tell me about him.

I am about to have a portrait painted of Val by an artist of remarkable talent who comes up here in the summer time.

Again I repeat and urge, let her alone.

Believe me, my dear Susan, cordially yours,
ALLEN DUNCAN.

They sat on the terrace together and Val had just declared her unalterable conviction on a certain question.

"I agree with you, my dear," Allen said smiling gravely. "Only, little girl, the choice must be wise. A life's happiness is a grave consideration. Everything pales into insignificance beside it. But it must be a certainty of happiness. Tell me about your artist, the thought of whom gives so soft a light to your eyes and makes the color flicker in your cheeks. Who is he?"

The shadows were lengthening on the terrace, and the great mountain ranges melted off in long undulations in the distance. The scene was fair and beautiful, and daisies covered the sunlit fields.

Valerie turned slowly and looked full at Allen from eyes of wonderful depth and beauty. There were stars in her eyes, the hall, and the butter shivered a visitor where they sat.

Valerie sprang up with a slight cry and extended both hands. Then turning, she led Dick forward.

"Here it is, cousin—my happiness," she said, smiling radiantly.

The Castle on the Cliffs.

My Dear Susan—Richard Fenton is a fine fellow and an artist of genius. He will be a celebrity. Val is engaged to him with my approval.

Don't distress yourself. If happiness is to be found on earth they will have it.

Write and congratulate the child. Yours cordially,
ALLEN DUNCAN.

FREE RECLINING CHAIR CARS.

"The Henderson Route"—Always First.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 29, 1903.—The traveling public will be pleased to learn of the latest innovation in the way of comfort in travel for its patrons which is now being offered by the most popular railroad, The "Henderson Route," which road has been officially termed the "Traveler's Official Route."

It has just been announced from the general office of the Louisville, Henderson & St. Louis railway that they now have in service on their night trains between Louisville and St. Louis, Free reclining Chair Cars, which have just been received from the shops and are a revelation in the car building's art.

The cars are strictly up to date, first-class "palaces of travel" on wheels, and which are promised the public by the Henderson Route.

Among other advantages offered in these highly finished cars, a few of the most important points only are mentioned:

They are solidly restful and are furnished with sixty-four reclining chairs, which are upholstered in beautiful green plush, in addition to smoking and toilet rooms being finished throughout in leather. They are also fitted up with triple trucks, which feature will do away with the jerk, jar at a strain incident to travel in the ordinary railway coach, and insure a smooth, comfortable ride. This should prove more than a popular feature in train service to the traveling public, and we can expect that in traveling you "get the Henderson Route" habit.

PONDS AND SWAMPS

They Offer Great Possibilities for the Nature Student.

Places of Wonderful Activity That May Be Studied with Interest—Some Things One May Find in Them.

A pond, particularly if a portion of or the margin is swampy, has great possibilities for the nature student. There seems to be no limit to the variety of living creatures which he may find there in the course of a year. In this respect a pond is superior even to a brook.

I live near such a pond and I visit it often. It has its counterpart in almost one of ten thousand little ponds throughout the country, yet the United States government does not employ a number of clerks sufficient to record the business which is transacted within sight of its banks. No matter how hot or how cold the weather; no matter how dull things are in the country round about—here there is always something interesting to be seen or heard. Here I come in the early spring, to see the first, and seemingly the brightest, of the marsh marigolds, reflected in the cold clear water, and to lift from the shallows masses of the transparent frog skin, in which may be seen scores of tiny black specks, which will some day be frogs. Here, too, I come at night to hear the lonely luteal calling his mate, in a voice which sounds like the water beating against the mouth of a cavern. And later in the year I find their nest in the marsh nearby, a handful of coarse grasses, with four or five buff eggs.

And so through the summer, when the turtles sit in rows on the half-sunken logs and when the frogs squat upon the lily pads, until the fall, when the muskrats build their winter houses on the mud flats, and when the black duck and the wild geese come to spend a few days on their way to the south. Nor is business suspended in the winter, for then under the shelving ice along the bank, I mark the traces of the mink, and when I see between the tiny footprints of a mink, I know pretty well what he was looking for.

Amongst the other inhabitants of this pond are some huge snapping turtles, whose age is the subject of frequent discussions at the nearest country grocery. Some bear upon their shells certain dates and marks, which is claimed to have carried more than 50 years ago. It is not often they are seen, but now and then one of the old villians will raise his great snake-like head above the surface of the pond and blink a pair of the coldest, crustiest eyes which ever disfigured the head of a reptile. Nothing in the pond is sacred to these hardened old sinners. No doubt they live largely on fish, but young muskrats and ducklings are often jerked below the surface of the pond to rise more dead and wild mice, which sometimes swim across, are foolhardy to say the least.

Last June I was walking along the bank of a little stream which flows through a meadow and into a pond when my attention was attracted by the peculiar movement of a patch of waving grass. It was easy to see that the wind had little to do with it, so I ran over to investigate. In the middle of a good-sized depression caused by the flattening down of the grass, stood a giant snapping turtle, weighing 50 pounds if an ounce, I should say, and with great horny jaws apace, ready for business. I guessed that it was probably a female on her way to deposit her eggs in the sand somewhere, so I decided not to interrupt her. Instead, I retired to a distance, and climbed a tree, whence I had a good view of the meadow and the surrounding country. The old lady snapper continued on her way, lurching through the grass like a tramp steamer in a heavy sea, and stopping now and then to raise her head and look around. In the course of time she came out of the meadow and into an old road with a sandbank running along one side of it. This bank seemed to be her destination, for on one side of it she halted, and began scraping a hole with her big, beak-like front feet. She seemed to be in no particular hurry, and as I was, I slipped down the tree and left her, which was my own time. By and by I returned, and there she was raking the sand into the hole, and the task was nearly done. I waited until she had completed her work, and as soon as she waddled away, I began to do some digging myself. Under some 12 inches of sand I came upon the eggs. 22 of them, pure white, and as round as marbles. In fact, they looked more like large white almonds than anything else I know of. I covered them up again, and if they were not discovered by a skunk or some other animal which is fond of such dainties, they were probably hatched some time in the fall.

CATTLE OF HUNGARY

They Are of a Peculiar White, Long-Horned Breed.

Are Found in Many Parts of Eastern Europe. What They Are Used for Draught Purposes of All Kinds.

The American traveler in south-eastern Europe can hardly have failed to notice the various breeds of white long-horned cattle which prevail there. The two best known breeds are the Italian and the Hungarian. It is probably safe to say that Hungarian cattle are an indigenous race, for the great source of supply for white cattle, even in Roman days, was the region that is represented to-day by Hungary as its center. This white breed had not been confined to Hungary, for it is to be found in Roumania, Transylvania, Moldavia, Besarabia, Galicia, etc. The Podolian cattle are also white, and perhaps shorter in the legs and deeper in the body than the Hungarian cattle of the plains, while their horns are also shorter and much thicker.

Hungarian cattle do all the draught work that is to be done; plowing is done with oxen, wagons are drawn by them, and, in fact, teams of four oxen do all the farm and general draught work that we do with horses. On farms they begin to work these cattle when three or four years old, but the peasants use them even at an earlier age. The oxen are controlled by word of mouth. After being worked two or three years they are often fattened for the butcher. Excepting those at labor, Hungarian cattle are generally in a semi-wild state, and live continuously out of doors. The puzata, or prairie ranges, carry enormous herds, their food being pasture only, except in winter time, when they get hay. The breeding animals, however, get some grain in addition. The cattle are looked after on the prairie by herdsmen, some of whom are horsemen, much after the manner of our cowboys of the western plains. These Hungarian herdsmen practically act as boundary riders, their duty being, as a rule, a land devil of fences.

The calves are dropped under wild conditions, similar, at any rate, to those enjoyed by our western range cattle, and it may be said that they show many similar traits. The young calves are stated to be yellowish, while those nearest white have a brown line down the neck and a fainter one down the back.

When between two or three years old the young are brought off the ranges and broken to yoke. Having on these plains to withstand the heat of summer and rigors of winter, these cattle become hardy, and the food they have naturally be accustomed to makes them most economical in their keep. When not working they will, for example, do well on a diet of maize straw and chaff.

Cows of Hungarian breed, it must be noted, are not so much so that the milk supply of the country is to a large extent, obtained from animals of foreign dairy breeds, mostly Swiss or German. Hungarian cattle must therefore be regarded as draught oxen pure and simple, and though Hungary is a great horse breeding country, still oxen are used alone for draught, and reared for that purpose, as being more economical in cost of food as compared with the horse, and having the advantage that they can be fattened after use. The East Indies and Africa are regions in which it is probable that Hungarian cattle could be well utilized. The points in favor of the breed are that they are reared under natural or semi-wild conditions, that their size, bulk and strength make them good draught oxen, that they thrive well on very poor fare, and that they can resist disease better than any other breeds. On the state farm of domain of Moskoves a team of Hungarian oxen were found which stood over 17 hands high, each animal weighed over one ton, and each carried in its legs were six feet from tip to tip, and this is often exceeded. Teams of oxen shod for road work measuring 16 hands in height are a frequent sight.

A SIMPLE QUESTION.

Hopkinsville People are Requested to Honestly Answer This.

Is not the word of a representative citizen of Hopkinsville more convincing than a doubtful assertion of people living everywhere else in the Union? Read this:

J. W. Tunks, of 302 West Seventh St., who is employed at M. C. Forbes Planning Mill says: "The condition of my health was such as to cause me a great deal of worry about my future. I had an almost constant aching across the small of my back and the kidney secretions were highly colored, excessive and irregular, in fact, the disorder was so pronounced that I had been said to be suffering from diabetes. I also suffered at this time with indigestion which caused me a great deal of distress. At one time I was scarcely able to do any work at all for nearly a year. I doctored, and tried various remedies but nothing did me any permanent good until I used Doan's Kidney Pills, which I procured at Thomas & Travern's drug store. I had taken them only a few days when I noticed a change for the better and by time I had finished the box I found that they had brought about so decided an improvement in my condition as to convince me of their real worth and I am more than thankful for the relief that I have received." #### The Best Remedy for Croup.

This is the season when the woman who knows the best remedies for croup is in demand in every neighborhood. One of the most terrible things about croup is that it awakens in the middle of the night by a whoop from one of the children. The croup remedies are almost as sure to be lost in case of croup as a revolver is sure to be lost in case of burglars. There used to be an old fashioned remedy for croup, known as hives syrup and tulu, but some modern mothers say that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is better, and does not cost so much. It causes the patient to "throw up" the phlegm "quicker, and gives relief in a shorter time. Give this remedy as soon as the croupy cough appears and it will prevent the attack. It never fails and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by Cook & Higgins, druggists.

The Great Southwest.

Many Seeking Homes Where Lands
Are Cheap and Climate is Mild

Low Rates for Homeseekers And Colonists Twice a Month.

Many farmers in the Northern and Eastern States are selling their high priced lands and locating in the Southwest—in Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas. Many who have been unable to own their homes in the older country are buying land at the low prices prevailing in the new country—$5, $10, $15 per acre and up. These lands are mostly out-of-the-forest lands, some of them possessing a deep rich soil producing corn, wheat, oats, clover, cotton, fruits, and vegetables. Well improved farms are scattered throughout this country. Many places with small clearings and some improvements can be bought very cheap. Our descriptive literature gives a fairly good idea of this country. It tells about the soil, crops, climate, people, schools and churches, water and health. It contains maps showing location of counties, towns, railways and streams, and gives names and addresses of real estate dealers in the towns.

Reduced rates for homeseekers and colonists are in effect the first and third Tuesday of each month, by way of St. Louis, Cairo or Memphis and the Cotton Belt Route. Let us send you our literature and quote you rates.

SWIMMING A HORSE.

Charles's Fine Performance in a Swollen River—A Few Painters.

Mr. Hough the other day had something to say about the swimming power of a horse, says Forest and Stream. Were a man to tell me that the average horse could not swim with a man on his back I should laugh at him. I have had too many of them swim with me on their backs. I rode on valley horses for 20 years and sometimes had the same horses four or five years, but I never had one which could not swim with a man on his back. I have often undressed; then, mounting my horse bareback, swam him for fifteen minutes at a time. I rode one horse four or five years that I would not hesitate to swim the Mississippi with. He was a slender, long-legged sorrel, and a fast one, too. I ran him against some of the fastest horses the cowboys could scare up, and he beat them all.

But I would never ask a horse to swim with his saddle on and then carry me. In that case I would swim behind him, holding on to his tail. I have seen several swim clinging to the horse's mane. That is a poor place. There is always danger of the horse biting the man with his foreleg; he cannot hit you with his hind feet if you swim holding to his tail.

In the summer of 1884 I was down on the Sabanal river, Texas, just where the railroad crosses it. The river was bank full after a heavy rain, and the current ran like a mill race. There was a catfish on our side but none on the other for a good many miles; and a stage coach full of passengers was water bound over there, and they were hungry. The men at the ranch wanted to send them something to eat, but said that none of their horses could swim in that current.

"I have one that can," I told them. "Get your ropes ready."

They got a long coil of half-inch rope, and cutting it in the middle we had two that would reach across. Then taking my horse I went to the river, stripped to my undershirt and drawers, and tying one end of each rope around my waist got my horse into the water and using only his head and halter strap, no bridle, swam him across, and the ropes were stretched and a basket hauled across. I was then ready to go back, but two ladies in the coach tried to stop me; they were afraid "that my nice horse would be drowned." They did not seem to care whether I was or not. I got the horse in the water again, then wrapping his tail around my left hand told him to "go ahead, Charles." I had never used a whip on him; he did not need it. He swam with the current and went 200 yards down stream before landing, then climbed out, none the worse for the trip.

In swimming a horse, if on his back, I would sit as far back as possible. Use no bridle, but only the halter; let the horse have his head and never hurry him.

House Flies.

The commonest house fly, musca domestica, breeds in manure and dooryard filth, and is found in nearly all parts of the world. On account of the conformation of its mouth parts, the house fly cannot bite, yet no impression is stronger in the minds of most people than that this insect does occasionally bite. This impression is due to the frequent occurrence in houses of another fly (stomoxys calcitrans), which may be called the stable fly, and which, while closely resembling the house fly, differs from it in the important particular that its mouth parts are formed for piercing the skin. This species takes refuge in houses when it rains and gives rise to the saying that flies bite only when it rains.

Storks Valuable to Egypt.

Were it not for the multitude of storks that flock to Egypt every winter there would be no living in some parts of the country, for after every inundation frogs appear in devastating numbers.

WOODEN BAIT FOR FISH.

Muskallunge, Eager Snappers at a Brightly Colored Stick.

In some of the northwestern waters experimenters with muskallunge have found that they take kindly to an odd wooden bait, shaped like a cylinder, three inches long and half an inch in diameter and painted red, white and blue, says the New York Sun. The body of it is ending from its tin fringe runs around its neck and in front of the tin is a sky blue. There are no white, red and sky blue fish in those waters or any other American waters, but the muskallunge bite freely at this thing in the belief that it is a fish. The tin fringe kicks up a rifle as it is pulled along the water, and the mimic waves thus crowd serve also to attract the attention of the fish.

It would seem that only the smaller muskallunge are fond of it, those from three to ten pounds hitting at it. So far no big fellow has tackled it.

The efficacy of this bait was discovered by accident. A man got to using it for bass when every other device in his tackle box had failed. He went to it as a last resort and cast for five minutes without getting a hint that there was a fish within a thousand miles. Then there was a big swirl in the water and a ten-pound musky had missed it. Three minutes afterward he got another strike, this time from an eight-pounder.

This bait has three hooks in a gang at its end and another gang of three hooks depending from its middle. The end gang of hooks fastened in the musky's mouth and the middle gang flopped over when the fish leaped and dived and fastened in the top of his head. Thereafter it was simply a question as to whether the bass line would hold.

The angler played the fish to the best of his ability, giving it line, but no slack, when it rushed, and keeping the rod bent with the strain as much as possible. By and by he had the satisfaction of seeing the muskallunge come to the top of the water and turn on its side. He reeled it in carefully, and when it was near the edge of the boat elevated the tip of his rod and held its head out of water for five minutes. He did this to weaken it.

When there did not seem to be a wriggle in its body, the man started to lift his prize. He depended solely on the line, for he thrusts his fingers into the gills or mouth of a muskallunge that has a breath in it is a fool. He hoisted slowly, having taken hold of the line six inches above the hooks. When some seven pounds of the fish were out of the water the line snapped, the muskallunge fell back and, of course, disappeared instantly, carrying the lure with it.

The man used strong language, but believed that he had learned something worth knowing. He got another wooden lure, with its patriotic hues, and found that the muskallunge were eager for it, and the next time he used it he had both a revolver and a gaff in his hand.

Lions in a Balloon.

Probably the most remarkable balloon ascent ever made took place at Reims recently. The author of this singular exploit was a Capt. Henri, a menagerie proprietor, who went upon a cage boat attached to a balloon, with two lions in the cage with him, and two attendants, MM. Wellet and Duchateau, on the top of the cage. The ascent took place at five p. m., and the balloon rose splendidly, in the presence of a great crowd, taking a course towards the Belgian frontier, descending without accident at Etainbourg at 6:30.

If any business man has been overlooked it was not intentional. But we do not expect to canvass the county. Don't stand back and wait for us to call on you, but call or send a message to the office at once if interested. When you see what is proposed you can order space if you want it, otherwise you are under no obligation to do so. But remember, if you are not in this edition after it is published to blame yourself, not us. We shall be glad to have all who wish to be represented. Business men, can you afford to be left out of this Pictorial Edition? This issue will be read and reread by Christian county people and kept as a souvenir.

Burned to Death.

Mrs. Rosa Aberil and two-year-old baby were burned to death at St. John. Another boy, Walter, aged four, will die. The funeral was held in Louisville, their former home.

Watch the Children.

Children need a parent's closest attention in matters of health, and particularly in carefully observing that the functions of digestion are working perfectly. From the little baby to the rolicking boy or the petted girl, the occasional use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will prove the greatest kind of health builder. How many of us remember during our childhood the time when the bottle of Castor Oil was taken from the shelf and father or mother coaxed us to take it. Child dren like Syrup Pepsin: take it as they would honey. All druggists sell it.

Large Potatoes.

The Hancock Clarion says: Gus Goering, a farmer, living near town, dug six potatoes from one hill, the largest of which weighed one and three-quarter pounds.

"One of my children was taken with cramp colic and suffered severely," says S. B. Elzee, of Mo-nett, Mo. "I telephoned for a doctor, then gave a dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and a few minutes later a second dose. Before the doctor came the child was relieved." For sale by Cook & Higgins, druggist.

Sent to Asylum

Meade Tharp, aged about 21 years, was adjudged of unsound mind, at Carrollton Ky., and sent to Lakeland.

Couldn't Stop Bigwale.

Laffand—"Bigwale ate half the turkey, two mone pies and a quarter of the plum pudding for his Thanksgiving dinner." Grolat—"You don't say! Who's his doctor? Will he get well?" Laffand—"Never touched him!" He took a swallow of Doc Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and went about his business. It's great stuff, you bet."

Declared a Dividend.

The directors of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company declared a dividend of 3 per cent.

SEISMIC SHOCK.

Hopkinsville Houses Shaken By Severe Earthquake

No Damage Resulted, But Vibrations Were Felt as Far South As Mississippi.

A severe earthquake shock was felt in the city and at several points in the county shortly after one o'clock Wednesday afternoon. The vibrations lasted nearly a quarter of a minute, during which windows and glass and queensware rattled, electric light globes were put in motion like pendulums and some clocks were stopped. The direction of the earth's disturbance seemed to be from North to South. The shock was the most severe experienced in this section for many years. So far as heard from no serious damage was done.

Distinct at Owensboro.

Owensboro, Ky., Nov. 4.—A distinct earthquake shock was felt in this city and county at 1:29 o'clock this afternoon. Buildings vibrated and in some stores articles fell from the shelves. The guests at the Rudd House were at dinner in the fifth-story dining room and were considerably frightened.

No Alarm in Evansville.

Evansville, Ind., Nov. 4.—A slight earthquake shock was felt here shortly after 1 o'clock. It was not sufficient to cause any alarm.

Two in Memphis

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 4.—Two distinct earthquake shocks were felt here shortly after 12 o'clock today. No damage resulted in Memphis or vicinity, but occupants of the principal office buildings made hasty exits to the streets.

Made Young Again.

"One of Dr. King's New Life Pills each night for two weeks has put me in my 'teens' again," writes D. H. Turner, of Dempseytown, Pa. They're the best in the world for Liver, Stomach, and Bowels. Purely vegetable. Never gripe. Only 25c at R. C. Hardwick's.

For Sale.

Desirable six room residence—half acre lot, stable, out buildings, fruit trees, etc. A. 1 location. Apply 223 E. 18th St.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

Mr. Duke's Dwelling and the Acme Mill's Damaged.

The dwelling of Mr. I. P. Duke, on O'Neal avenue, was struck by lightning Tuesday night and badly damaged. Members of the family who were in the house were considerably shocked. The bolt hit the chimney demolishing it and one gable-end of the cottage was also torn out.

Late Monday afternoon the Acme Mills and Elevator Company's new building was hit by a bolt and several windows were broken. The damage was small. The corner of Forbes' planing mill was also hit and two men at work knocked down, but not injured.

A Sure Thing.

It is said that nothing is sure except death and taxes, but that is not altogether true. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption is a sure cure for all lung and throat troubles. Thousands can testify to that. Mrs. C. B. VanMetre, of Shepherdstown, W. Va., says: "I had a severe case of Bronchitis and for a year tried everything I heard of, but got no relief. One bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery then cured me absolutely." It's infallible for Croup, Whooping Cough, Grip, Pneumonia and Consumption. Try it. It's guaranteed by R. C. Hardwick, druggist. Trial bottles free. Regular sizes 50c and $1.00.

ASYLUM PATIENT

From Ohio County Dies at the Institution.

Walker Haynes, a patient at the Western Asylum from Ohio county, who had been in the institution for several years died Monday night. The body was shipped to Deaneville for interment Tuesday.

A Great Mistake.

I wish to say to the readers of the Kentuckian, that by some means or other a rumor has been circulated that many, if not really all the chrysanthemums grown for exhibition purposes have been destroyed. This rumor is wholly without foundation. I have made a careful investigation of nearly 1,500 plants and have not found a dozen plants injured by the frost. I found, too, that in my judgment, the collection as a whole is 100 per cent. better than last year. The show will occur Nov. 11, 12 and 13. The sale of tickets is already large, assuring success. Thursday, Nov. 12, will be Hopkinsville day. A 50 cent rate has been granted by the railroad from Hopkinsville. So come and enjoy a delightful day with the Fall Queen.

Respectfully,

C. E. DUBLEY.

Pembroke, Ky.

A Startling Test.

To save a life, Dr. T. G. Merritt, of North McWhorter, Pa., made a startling test, resulting in a wonderful cure. He writes: "A patient was attacked with violent hemorrhages, caused by ulceration of the stomach. I had often found Electric Bitters excellent for acute stomach and liver troubles so I prescribed them. The patient gained from the first, and has not had an attack in 14 months." Electric Bitters are positively guaranteed for Dyspepsia, indigestion, Constipation and Kidney troubles. Try them. Only 50c at R. C. Hardwick's.

Fine Corn Crop.

Mr. Jas. M. Medley, one of the leading farmers of the Beverly neighborhood, has presented the Kentuckian with some of the finest specimens of corn we have seen. There were ears of three different varieties, the white Willis, the famous "yard long" colored corn and one other variety. The ears were more than a foot long and as fine a quality as one could wish. Mr. Medley has hundreds of barrels of the same sorts.

For the serious diseases that attack the kidney, Prickly Ash Bitters is an unfailing remedy. Relieves backache, swelling of feet and persistent headache, symptoms which indicate kidney trouble. R. C. Hardwick.
